Description

Altes Haus is an ancient, fascinating house built in 1550, then restored in 1969, and finally completely renovated in 2011.

This amazing accommodation in the beautiful Engandine area, in Switzerland, not far away from the famous ski trails of the country, is a true jewel that represents more than a mere house: Altes Haus is a timeless experience, from past to present, to the future.

Altes Haus is composed by a spacious living room with a charming fireplace and four individually designed double rooms. One of these, in particular, is an original pine-paneled room.

The house also boasts two single rooms and one bedroom with bulk beds, perfect for kids. The bathrooms in the apartment are three: two with a bathtub, and one with a shower. Guests will also have the chance to enjoy a completely equipped kitchen, a very convenient ski storage room and a garage for cars.

Wood and stone dominate Altes Haus, in all rooms: the result is a perfect mixture of different centuries, with the comfort guaranteed by mordern technology. Altes Haus is perfect for those willing to spend their time in a timeless environment, breathing fully the irresistible charm of Switzerland. The furniture of the house is especially peculiar, because it includes piece from the XVII century and design objects from the XX century.

Among the many amenities and additional features, it's worth mentioning a beautiful balcony and a nearby garden, but also a dishwasher, a dryer, a washing machine.

Location

The Engadin (or Engandine) area in Switzerland is one of the most appreciated by tourists world-wide, especially because of its close proximity with the famous St. Moritz. The valley lies at the center of the Alpine range and is just a small part of a 300 km-long area starting from the Maloja Pass to the border of Tyron.

Engandin is divided in two different areas, each characterized by precise peculiarities: the Upper Engandin area shows a remarkably straight and wide valley, while the Lower Engandin area has inns dropping quickly and more tortuous paths.
